1. the Lord, have called then in rightcoursess and will hold thine hand and keep thes and give thee for a covent of the people, a light of the Gendlem, to open the blind eyes, brirg out the prisoners, and those in darkmeas out of the preon house. I have put tay words in thy mouth, and have covered then in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens and lay the founds tions of the earth, and make my judgment to rest for a light of the people. Harken unto me, ye that know rightcoursens, the people in whose heart is my law; fear ye not the represent of men, nether be ye afraid of their worship; for the moth scall cat them up like a garment, and the worm shall cat them like wool; but my rightquusness shall be forever, and my salvation from generation

The declarations of God's word are our whole guide and justification, and we do not need any other. The just and upright judges of our land have themselves always acknowledged the Supreme obligation of God's law and God's righ'eousness, and have sometimes signally and luminously set forth the prerogative and duty of the ministers of God's word to lay God's rightcousness to the line and his judgment to the plummet of men's political as well as social conduct. How solemn and striaing in this respect was the testimony of the recent venerated and lamented Judge Wood, of New Haven, who died instantly after a most explicit and Scriptural utterance on this subject. The very question under discussion was the appropriate duties of ministers of the g spel in reference to the civil government under which they live.

Waat shall we say of cases said Judge Wood, in the discussion was the appropriate duties of ministers of the g spel in reference to the civil government under which the vive.

What shall we say of cases said Judge Wood, in the course of his argument, in twhich the action of civil government is concerned in the plotting of excedition of crime, and the poople are called upon to ald the scokeme? Has the minister of God no warning to give? Must be be silent? But it is said that the preacher can have nothing to say in matters in which the scilent of civil government; or any part of the prope, are the meetives a manifest invasion upon the principles of mornity, then it is that politish have invaded the domain of the preacher, against those lejunctions of moral duty, which he is to proclaim and uphold in the name of God, whether men will hear of forbers. He remains in his appropriate sphere of duty, when, is the name of Christ, he warms and rebuses those, who, with this politics, thus come up against the domain of moral duty. The formalism of any political party, committed to the enactment of any law or scheme involving moral evil, cannot revoke the authority of Obries, or the duty of preachers of the gospel to uphold that authority against invasion. We have an example in Paul himself, an in spired apostle of Obrist, to show particularly that ministers of the gospel are to apply the principles of religion and morality to the sphere of political late to the Philippiant, 1.27, that they conform their political life in the State to the teachings of the gospel. "Let your conversation be an becomet the gospel of Christ." That it our translation, and the Greek word which the aposite uses is 'politicnesthe." That it, our principles of the state to the State, correspond with the teachings of Obrist. In other words, let the gospel rule you, as you act is society and with the citizers of the State, and be not withdrawn from your duty by fear of aiversaries in the State to their relation to their lellow citizens and the State.

This, said Judge Wood, is all I have to say. And th

This, said Judge Wood, is all I have to say. And these impressive truths were the last words of this virtuous eitizen and upright jurist, this good and righteous man. I have been exceedingly interested in his fine and discriminating exposition of the passage in Philippians. His interpretation of the passage is unquestionably true, and it throws back a beautiful light of filustration upon Acts 23: I, where the same Greek word is used in reference to Paul's own life as a citizen in all good conscience before God. Now my friends, how can you put away these truths from you, or what additional proof can you possibly demand, that they belong to you, and were intended for you? Do you think, because your names are not down in the indictment that therefore you can deny the iniquity, or because there is no shame nor plushing for such abominations, that, therefore, God will excuse you, or because you belie the word of the Lord, therefore, it will not be a consuminag fire to you?

Nay, but they seath the Lord of hosts, Recause years. This, said Judge Wood, is all I have to say. And cuse you, or because you belie the word of the Lord, therefore, it will not be a consuming fire to you?

Nay, but thus saith the Lord of hosts, Because ye speak th's word, behold I will make my words in thy mou h fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them and they that he not schamed of this abomination, shall fall smong them that fall.

There is not the slightest possibility of an excuse for this wickedness, or for submission to it, or acceptance or endurance of it by the people. Of all the radiant light of a divine revelation, perhaps this is the clearest, that the Lord God abhors injustice and will punish it to the uttermost in nations as well as individuals. Again and again break forth the thunders of God's word against this very wickedness, and no lawyer on earth could draw up the counts of the indictment with greater severity and rigidness and unescapable tenacity of grasp upon ourselves and at the end of every count comes the question from the insulted majesty of Jehovah.

Shall I not visit for such things as those, and shall not my soul be aveged on such a sation! We to thee that spot and they dealt not treacherously with thes; when should that men should do to you do ye even so to them. Hence all men. Open thy mouth for the domb in the cause of all such as are as pointed for destraction. Defend the poor and needy. Plead the cause of the oppressed; loose the banks of wickedness; unto the heavy burdens; let the oppressed go free, and break every yoke.

These are God's express commands, and there is great power in the declaration of them against the rins we have been denouncing. They only need to be uttered and God's own majesty of justice is with them, and the tyrants quail and tremble, and the people's heart can be reached and the popular sympathy excited, and when that is the case the weakest voice is heard, as the wailing of an infant will reach the mother's heart, though the din of battle were roaring in the air around her. The weakest voice is heard, for the sense of justice is keen and tender in the common soul of man, and ever a wild half buried moan upon the wind will arrest attentention. As when the night blast from the moors wafts the cry of distress through the cottage shutters, men rise from their warm fireplaces and open the door and look out into the storm, and once get them to feel and know that their fellow beings are perishing, their bousehold comforts cannot detain them, but forth they go: so shall it be at the cry of the oppressed when God pleases to carry it into the common heart and make men hear it. We may yet witness such a simultaneous and heroic impuise of humanity against these dreadful outrages by un-These are God's express commands, and there is witness such a simultaneous and heroic impulse of humanity against these dreadful outrages by un-just judges and unrighteous laws.

humanity against these dreadful outrages by unjust judges and unrighteous laws.

DOWN ON THE RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPERS.

And then, my friends, when the cause of humanity and justice is popular and pays, you will witness the spectacle of conservative religious newspapers cheering on the ministry in the very work of the gospel, which now they dare to stigmatize as treason against the government, a disgrace to the pulpit and abomination in the sight of God. But so it always has been. There is a species of creatures that, like sea birds, infest the mud shallows when the tide is out, and lay their eggs and gobble up their garbage. And so these creatures of the press, when the tide of popular sympathy rolls in, and floats your once stranded vessel, can do nothing but flap their wings and scream over the rejoicing waves; but when the mud flats are bare, they deposit their opinions. They hatch cockatrice's eggs and weave the spider's web. He that eateth of their eggs dieth, and that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper. Their webs shall not become garments—their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity—the way of peace they know not, and there is no judgment in their goings—they have made them crooked paths. Whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace, for by their counsel judgment is turned away backward and justice standeth afar off—for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. But God disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their enterprise. He taketh the wise in their own craftinoss, and the counsel of the froward is carried headlong. He lets them fall into their own pit; in the net which they hid is their own foot taken.

THE DECISION AN OVERDOSE OF INJUSTICE.

the froward is carried headlong. He lets them fall into their own pit; in the net which they hid is their own foot taken.

THE DECISION AN OVERDOSE OF INJUSTICE. Such already seems to be the way in which he is letting the judges and the rulers abhor judgment and prevent all equity—making their heart ready. like an oven, till it burneth as a flaming fire. Their own baking is devoured by it. They have gone so far that every conscience is startled and revolted at guch wickedness. It reminds us of the recent dreadful attempt at poisoning by the bakers of China; they over-poisoned to such terrible excess, that an almost instant revulsion in the stomachs of their victims threw off the deadly administration and saved them. Just so, the impious declaration that black men, or of the African race, have no rights that white men are bound to respect, coming from a court of justice is an over dose of poison, and turns the stomachs even of the lawyers, and the reasons given for the decision become the main instruments in convincing the people, enlightening their judgment, rnd rousing both the conscience and the heart into strong abnorrence of the decision itself.

RESISTANCE TO TYRANTS IS OBEDIENCE TO GOD.

My friends, you men of liberty and pride have a maxim that runs thus: Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God; and unless you can prove that tyrants are the powers ordained of God, it is a good maxim and perfectly true, provided you take such modes of resistance as are agreeable to God's will. Resistance against injustice and cruelty to others, who are thrown helpless on your protection; this is beyond all question obedience to God. Open thy mosth for the denish, in the cause of all such as are oppressed. At the great law of love.

If them forbest to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and these that are ready to be slein, (and here it is a livit as a livit has a ready to be slein, and here it is a livit as a livit as a ready of the ready

At the bar of God it will be no excuse or shield for your silence, your complicity with crime, your refusal to show mercy, your passing by on the other side, that your government forbade you to show mercy, and commanded you to be the executioner of its cruelty, or that your judge on earth declared the victims of your cruelty to have been of a hated and trampled race, who had no rights that you were bound to respect. All that will only be an aggravation of your guilt. And mere especially, because the way in which God commands you to defend and rescue the oppressed, and deliver them from such cruelty, is simply, first of all, to apply the sentence of God's word in condemnation of it. Even that, perhaps, you refuse to do, perhaps you refuse to hear it, perhaps you are resolved that it shall not be spoken. Well, my friends, "Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself but shall not be heard; and he that turneth sway his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination." Which law will you hear and obey—God's or man's?

A DEFENCE OF POLITICAL SERMONS.

My business is to use God's word; that is my weapon, and by God's help I will use it faithfully. There may be a conspiracy against it, as with Jeremah when the same iniquity of oppression was to be condemned by the Prophet. But the one command upon us as watchmen for God, and preachers of his gospel, is to preach his word, and apply it to this as well as other sins. And now tell me, I pray you, how can we apply it, or where, or to whom, if the moment we make the outery commanded of God against this iniquity, the moment we point God's truth, and make it burn there, the very church of Christ cry out, "A way with it! Crucify it! We will hear, we will put a stop to such preaching." Where can we bring God's word to bear upon this sin, my brethren, if not in the pulpit, the last resort of freedom. And if you surrender up the pulpit at the cry of scurrilous men in public newspapers, shouting like the rioters against Elisha, "Go up,
